INTRODUCTION

Approximately one-third of community-dwelling individuals aged 60 and over will experience a fall annually, and one-in-five of those falls will result in a serious injury.

The risk of falling increases when someone has:

- Fallen before
- Balance problems
- Chronic diseases, such as arthritis
- Depression
- Foot pain or poor footwear
- Hazards in the home
- Multiple medications
- Drug and alcohol use/abuse
- Memory problems
- Fear of falling
- Muscle weakness
- Problems with walking or unsteady gait
- Hearing problems
- Vision problems
- Vitamin D deficiency

Most falls are caused by a combination of risk factors. The more risk factors a person has, the greater their chances of falling. There is strong evidence suggesting interventions addressing multiple risk factors can reduce the number of falls.

In order to meet the ever-growing demand for fall prevention services, the number of evidence-based fall risk reduction/prevention programs has grown in Alameda County; older adults and service providers have an increasing array of program choices to fit a diverse set of needs and available resources.

This resource guide is intended to assist service providers and older adults in selecting programs that best suit their needs. It highlights organizations that offer resources and classes and is not exhaustive. Programs are generally evidence-based; programs listed within the guide are available free of charge or for a nominal fee. A few of the programs are particularly intended for frail individuals. Not all programs are available in languages other than English. Please call for information about language capacity. Many programs also post their class schedules online, so you may check their website for more information. You may also contact Alameda County Area Agency on Aging, Senior Information and Assistance Program for a conversation with a social worker with county-wide knowledge of resources at 510-577-3530.

FALL PREVENTION EDUCATION

Experiencing a fall, regardless of whether it results in an injury, can greatly impact one's quality of life. It is common for older adults to be concerned about falling, which may lead to a reduction in activities and social interactions. This, in turn, can contribute to a decline in health, feelings of depression, increased social isolation, and a sense of helplessness.

Increasing one's physical strength and balance plays a vital role in reducing the risk of falling. Engaging in activities such as walking, gardening, and dancing are all excellent ways to maintain fitness and overall health, contributing to a more confident and active lifestyle.

Evidence-based Fall Prevention Programs are specifically designed to reduce the risk of falling, safely increase physical activity levels, and improve balance and strength. Each of these programs meets the Older Americans Act criteria for evidence-based programs and are proven to be effective and appropriate for older adults. The following programs are offered locally by certified trainers. For more information on Evidenced-based Fall Prevention Programs, visit the National Council on Aging's website at www.ncoa.org.

A Matter of Balance (MOB) is an 8-week program designed to reduce the fear of falling and increase activity levels among older adults. Participants learn to view falls as controllable, set goals to increase activity, identify and address fall risk factors at home, and exercise to increase strength and balance.

Bingocize® is a 10-week program that combines the bingo game with exercise and health education. The overall goal of the program is to improve mobility and independence, learn how to reduce falls and other health-related behaviors, and socially engage with other older adults.

Enhanced Fitness is an arthritis friendly group exercise and falls prevention program that is proven to support older adults at all fitness levels in becoming more active, energized, and empowered. Classes focus on four key components: low impact cardio, balance work, strength training and stretching.

Lifestyle Integrated Functional Exercise (LIFE) is an individual physical activity program that integrates strength and balance exercises into regular daily tasks. The program is designed to blend balance and strength training into the participants' everyday activities, effectively improving their overall functional fitness and well-being and in turn reducing the risk of fall.

FALL PREVENTION EDUCATION

Tai Chi for Arthritis/Fall Prevention helps to improve muscular strength flexibility, balance, and stamina. Many studies have shown Tai Chi to be one of the more effective exercises for preventing falls.

Tai Ji Quan: Moving for Better Balance™ is a 24-week program delivered in two one-hour sessions each week. Sessions consist of warm-up exercises; core practices, which include a mix of practice of forms, variations of forms, and mini-therapeutic movements; and brief cool-down exercises.

Walk With Ease – developed by the Arthritis Foundation, this structured walking program is tailored to increase mobility and reduce stiffness and pain, especially for individuals dealing with arthritis or joint-related issues. The program focuses on three key components: walking, stretching, stretching exercises. Participants learn proper walking techniques, with a gradual progression in time and intensity to build endurance.

The following organizations offer classes specifically designed to reduce the risk of falling, safely increase physical activity levels, and improve balance and strength. Call local programs for more information. Contact local senior centers for additional information about group physical activity opportunities.

HOME SAFETY & MODIFICATIONS

Older adults can prevent falls and continue to live safely at home by making home safety modifications. Making a few simple modifications can turn a home into a safe and comfortable place. Some home safety modifications may require a professional or housing contractor and can be quite expensive, but most home modifications needed to improve safety have a low to moderate cost. Home safety modifications can include adding grab bars, improving lighting, and removing or repairing trip hazards.

Fall Prevention classes provide information about simple home safety and distribute related safety checklists. These classes provide education supporting good safety habits, such as improving lighting and eliminating or moving furniture and rugs. The Alameda County EMS, Senior Injury Prevention Program also provides a home safety checklist on their website at <https://ems.acgov.org/CommttyResources/SIPP.page>.

Medical Alert Systems and emergency response devices can add additional home safety support by monitoring and detecting falls. Go to the Additional Community Resources section for more information on medical alert systems.

The programs listed below provide free home modifications, mostly to low-income seniors, and most programs have a cap on costs per household. Some programs will assist tenant-occupied homes but may require owner approval. Make sure to discuss all eligibility requirements and program guidelines to ensure that your residence qualifies.

MEDICATION SAFETY

Medications, including those purchased over the counter, can cause side effects that increase the risk of a fall. Prescribed medications for blood pressure, heart, and pain management are associated with these kinds of side effects. The body's reaction to medications can change over time, resulting in some medications that were fine in the past may now cause adverse side effects. Having your physician or pharmacist review your medicines and make changes, if necessary, can reduce the risk of side effects that can contribute to a fall.

Medicare, Part D, has a program called the Medications Therapy Management (MTM). Part D drug plans must, at a minimum, offer annual comprehensive reviews of medications for eligible plan members (typically people that take several medications for more than one chronic health condition) at no additional cost. Reviews are typically scheduled with a pharmacist or health care provider.

The programs listed below offer medication reviews by a pharmacist for older adults at risk for falls.

NUTRITION SUPPORT

Nutrition is a key factor in the prevention of falls among older adults, as an inadequate diet can lead to muscle weakness, impaired coordination, limited mobility, and both visual and cognitive impairment. These factors make individuals more susceptible to falling. A balanced diet that includes protein, calcium, vitamin-D, and an adequate intake of fluids helps maintain muscle mass, strength, supports proper nerve-muscle function, and ensures overall health, reducing the risk of falls and related injuries in older adults. The programs and organizations below offer nutritious meals and food options, including nutrition education classes.

Senior group dining sites throughout Alameda County serve nutritious lunches to older adults providing an opportunity to socialize with others. Many sites also offer nutrition education classes led by a dietitian. A variety of ethnic meals are also available. Call Alameda County Senior Information and Assistance for local site information at 510-577-3530.

Meals on Wheels (MOW) programs are available throughout Alameda County to serve healthy home-delivered meals to older adults, 60 years and older, who are unable to prepare their own meals and have difficulty with mobility. Some programs can accommodate special dietary needs. For local program information, contact Meals on Wheels of Alameda County, call or text 510-777-9560, or visit... www.feedingseniors.org.

Mercy Brown Bag distributes grocery bags filled with fresh produce, healthy grains, canned goods, lean protein throughout Alameda County, twice a month. Contact Mercy Brown Bag: 510-269-9640.

Alameda County Community Food Bank provides connection to different food sources throughout Alameda County; from emergency groceries to home-delivered groceries and CalFresh assistance to help buy groceries every month.

For more information about food and nutrition resources, check out the Senior Food & Nutrition Resource Guide provided by the Alameda County Senior Information and Assistance Program. To obtain a copy, call 510-577-3530 or go to...

HEALTH SCREENINGS

VISION

Routine vision screening can help minimize falls. Vision impairment can include blurry vision and glare, poor depth perception, and /or problems going from light to dark. These conditions can increase the risk of falling because they affect balance and decrease the ability to see clearly. Vision problems can more than double the likelihood of falling. It is recommended to have a routine eye exam annually. The cost of vision exams varies, and not all insurance programs cover the cost.

Original Medicare, Part A and Part B, does not cover routine eye exams for glasses or contact lenses. For more information on Medicare coverage, contact the Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP) at 510-832-3040.

BONE DENSITY TESTING

When preventing falls, bone density testing plays a key role. A bone density test is often performed using Dual-Energy X-ray Absorptiometry (DXA) scans, that measures strength and density of bones. While most insurance companies do not require prior authorization for a DXA, insurance coverage varies by plan. For more information visit the Bone Health and Osteoporosis Foundation (BHOFF) website at... www.bonehealthandosteoporosis.org

PODIATRY SERVICES

Overall foot health and treating common foot problems, such as calluses, bunions, and ingrown toenails can help prevent issues that can cause unsteadiness while standing and at risk of a fall. Wearing proper footwear can also help to prevent falls.

Bay Area Community Health (BACH) provides podiatry services at the City of Fremont's Age Well Center at Lake Elizabeth on the 2nd Wednesday of the month. Adults 55 and older can access toenail and callus care by calling BACH at 510-252-5845 to schedule an appointment.

Contact your healthcare provider for additional foot care resources.

SOCIAL ISOLATION & SUPPORT

Living alone or having limited social interactions can significantly impact the physical health and well-being of older adults. Studies have found that there's an association between social isolation and a heightened risk of falls among older adults.

The following programs and services provide socialization support to older adults that are homebound throughout Alameda County. Contact local senior centers for additional information about social activity opportunities.
